Times Newspapers Are Closed in Britain

Union Turmoil Continued Until The Last Hours

By Robert D. Hershey Jr. LONDON, Nov. 30 (NYT) — The Times, a British institution and perhaps the world's most famous newspaper, suspended publication tonight after failing to win agreement from its unions to stop unpredictable and costly disruptions.

The management said the paper, along with the Sunday Times and three supplements, will not reappear until all 65 hargaining units of its nine unions come to terms. This, it is widely expected, may take months and expected, may take months and there are even a few people who predict that the 193-year old paper, whose logotype features a clock set permanently at 4:30—the traditional deadline for printing London morning newspapers—may never be seen again.

The suspension occurs seven months after the company issued an ultimatum that it would close down Nov. 30, throwing 4,250 persons out of work, unless its conditions for uninterrupted pro-duction were met. Only 17 of the 65 units — some of them with only a handful of members covering 800 workers bad agreed by tonight and one major union has refused to negotiate at all while under the threat of suspen-

"This is a sad moment for everyone who shares our belief that all our newspapers and our staff can enjoy together a prosperous future," Marmaduke J. At the meeting, which is expected to end soon, party leaders are believed to be discussing formal approval of a number of sweeping initiatives by Mr. Teng, including greater use of foreign technology, the creation of a legal system, more elections of local officials and a more market-oriented economy.

The sources in Peking said that a number of new posters had gone up since yesterday urging Chinese not to attack Mr. Hua. SALT-2 Agreements

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (WP) - Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., potentially a key figure in next year's U.S. Senate debate on a new strategic arms limitation treaty, has infuriated the Carter administra-tion by attacking the SALT agreements at a meeting of NATO parli-amentarians in Lisbon.

Attacked by Jackson By Robert G. Kaiser the SALT agreements nearing completion give the Soviet Union sub-adequate protection to North At-lantic Treaty Organization mem-bers in Central Europe.

The Monday speech was Sen.

Jackson's first formal public statement of disapproval of the new SALT pacts.

You just don't begin the SALT debate in a European forum like that one," a senior administration official complained yesterday. "At least Jackson owed the president an opportunity to respond" to his criticisms of the new pacts before attacking them publicly, the official added. "I really am appalled."

Serious Misgivings

Though Sen. Jackson has long been known to harbor serious mis-givings about the SALT negotia-President Carter expressed dis-satisfaction and disappointment to-time the effort no matter how diffi-day at Israel's and Egypt's delay in cult it might be in the future." tions, this was his first public statement suggesting that he would not support the agreements that the Carter administration hopes to submit to the Senate early next year.

"As it is being negotiated," Sen.

Jackson told the NATO group Monday in Lisbon, "the treaty will permit the Soviets to deploy a substantially superior strategic force than the United States will be allowed.

The Carter administration and its allies in the Senate hotly dispute that conclusion.

At one time, the administration was anxious to witt Sen. Jackson's approval for its SALT agreements. Sen. Jackson is an influential member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, and he did support — with reservations — the first SALT agreements in 1972.

The administration's initial SALT proposals to the Soviets were drafted largely to satisfy concerns expressed by Sen. Jackson. But those proposals were discarded in subsequent negotiations, and ad-ministration officials held out only modest hopes that Sen. Jackson might support the new agreements.

In light of his speech Monday.
Sen. Jackson's support now appears unattainable, administration officials said yesterday. Officials expressed concern last night that Sen. Jackson and other U.S. delegates to the NATO parlioss. delegates to the NATO parhamentarians' meeting, known as the North Atlantic Assembly, would force a potentially divisive vote on SALT in that body.

Sen. Jackson has backed a move hy Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., also a delegate to the assembly in Lisbon, to amend a pro-SALT resolution introduced by a member of the Dutch Parliament. The Dutchman proposed a gen-eral endorsement of SALT and East-West detente. Sen. Hollings responded with a proposal to en-dorse "an equal, balanced, verifi-able SALT-2 treaty that will constrain the further growth of Soviet nuclear forces deployed against members of the North Atlantic Alliance."

Administration officials said this language would be acceptable but they hoped for a compromise that would please all U.S. delegates to

Romania's highest policy-making body gave its full support to Presi-dent Nicolae Ceausescu yesterday in his latest confrontation with the Soviet Union over defense policy.

In what seems to be part of an orchestrated campaign to demonstrate public support for the 60year-old Romanian leader, the Communist Party Central Committee was called into special sessinn to hear a report by Mr. Ceausescu on his stand at last week's Moscow summit meeting of the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact.

The sessinn unanimously en-dorsed his opposition to proposals to increase the pact's defense budget and to increase the integration of armies of member countries.

Mr. Ceausescu's assertion of Romanian independence in a way that could not be attributed to him Foreign diplomats in Bucharest believe that after several years of uneasiness, relations between Romania and its Warsaw Pact al-lies have reached their lowest point in a decade. The Central Committee session is interpreted as a sign that Mr. Ceausescu is unlikely to make any move to heal the rift in the near future and is preparing to face the inevitably angry Soviet re-action to his unprecedented public In Moscow, President Leonid Brezhnev indirectly confirmed Mr. Ceausescu's disclosures by calling for the "preservation and strengthening of the joint armed forces of the Warsaw treaty" in a report to the Supreme Soviet (Parliament) on last week's summit. He said this was necesary in view of heightened military outlays within the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. A nearly identical statement was issued in Warsaw after a meeting of the Polish Politburo that formally endorsed all the decisions made at the summit. news agency, the Central Committee session heard more than 100 terests of the whole nation" and were "in line with Romania's continued progress and welfare."

In a resolution, the Central Committee realfirmed its support for a statement hy Mr. Ceausescu on Monday that "Romania's armed erroneous reports from Yugoslavia that all six Warsaw Pact ambassadnrs, including that of the Soviet forces will never he committed to combat except by decision of the supreme leading bodies of our party and state." This apparently referred to his refusal to accept a Union, had been called home from Bucharest for consultations. The "crisis" waned quickly when three of those ambassadors turned up that same evening at a reception in more unified military command of Warsaw Pact troops, as proposed by Moscow.

Interest now centers on a major foreign-policy speech Mr. Ceauses-cu will deliver tomorrow at celebra-tions marking the 60th anniversary of the formation of the modern Romanian state. Western diplo-mats believe he is likely to defend his actions forcefully but unlikely to provoke a total breach with the Warsaw Pact at this time.

Russia Cites Arms Race

MOSCOW, Nov. 30 (Reusers) -The Soviet Union declared today that the defense potential of the Warsaw Pact must be strengthened to counter what it called the arms race launched by NATO.

The Kremlin statement, published in full in today's newspapers, was the first hint in the Soviet press that a rise in military expenditures was discussed at last week's Warsaw Pact meeting. The statement said the task of halting the arms race and launching a process of disarmament was "a key problem of contemporary in-ternational life." But it added: "However, the Soviet Union proceeds from the fact that, in view of the arms race sustained and constantly whipped up by the NATO states, the necessity exists to maintain and strengthen the defense potential of the combined armed forces of the Warsaw Pact."

A Soviet buildup of these "theater nuclear weapons" has progressed so far, Sen. Jackson charged, that the Soviet Union might be able to launch "a first, disarming strike" against NATO's nuclear stockpiles in Europe.

Sen Indrees and the assertion.

Sen. Jackson said the restriction in the emerging SALT pacts on the range of land-based Cruise missiles will make it difficult for the West to counter Soviet force in Europe since the land-based Cruise missile would have been the logical weap on for NATO to use to match the Soviet buildup.

A protocol to the new pacts would limit the range of land-based Cruise missiles to 600 miles, limiting their effectiveness in Europe.

The administration and SALT supporters have said that the proto-col will only remain in force for a period of several years, during which the United States can develop long-range Cruise missiles for subsequent deployment in Europe

if necessary.
Sen. Jackson said in Lisbon that it was "hopelessly naive" to argue that the protocol would not be extended beyond its initial duration

Pope Pledges Aid in Fight For Rights, Africans Say

ROME, Nov. 30 (AP) - Pope John Paul II met four black natiooalist leaders yesterday and pledged to use his moral authority against discrimination in white-ruled countries of southern Africa, the black nationalists said today.

The disclosure was made at a news conference by two of the leaders, Oliver Tambo, exiled president of the African National Congress, a South African group, and George Siluodika, a member of the execu-tive of the Zimbabwe National Patriotic Front, which is fighting against Prime Minister Ian Smith's government in Rhodesia.

The Vatican declined to confirm

According to the African leaders, those at the audience included Kumbirai Kangai, secretary of so-cial services and transport of the Zimbabwe froot, and Sam Nujoma, president of the South-West African Peoples Organization, which is fighting for black independence in South-West Africa, or Namibia.

If Mao made mistakes, said the author of the poster, who signed himself "an bonest man," then be should be crincized openly. "You can elamp down silence again on the people, but that won't solve anything," the poster said.

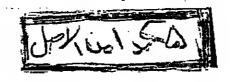

It appeared that Mr. Teng was trying to allow some popular outlet for the long suppressed frustrations of the past decade but at the same time was trying to direct all developments from above. This conflict

It was also unclear what effect, if any, the posters and gatherings have had on the inner workings of the party. Diplomats in the capital had believed the posters signaled an impending change in the make-up of the Politburo, but Mr. Teng has denied this will happen. Politics in China, where most important information is beld in tight confidentiality, often has defied analysis by foreigners and the Chianalysis by foreigners and the Chinese people. Even Communist a

U.S. Is Said to Reconsider A-War Strategy

By Richard Burt

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (NYT) Quietly, and with little public debate, the Carter administration is taking tentative steps toward a drastic revision of the U.S. policy of relying upoo large-scale retaliaoon for deterring a nuclear war with the Soviet Union.

Aides in the Defense Department and the National Security Council cited several new military initiatives as indications that the government was oo the verge of what nne called a "revolution" in nuclear strategy. According to these officials, the purpose of the initiatives is to give the United States an enhanced ability to wage a limited nuclear conflict, in addition to its ability to engage in largescale warfare.

Officials who discussed the issue asked not to be identified, because ouclear strategy is viewed as deli-cate and no firm policy has yet Richard Nixon, arriving for his appearance yesterday before the Oxford Union, is shielded from hostile crowd by policemen.

In part, the new interest in pre-paring for a small-scale nuclear war is related in the proposed U.S.-So-viet arms limitation treaty, hecause programs like the administration's lan for the extension of civil de lense facilities are seen as a means of building support for a new accord among conservatives in the Senate. But the plans also touch on basic strategic questions that have been debated since the beginning of the nuclear era. Series of Proposals

Although President Carter is on record as questioning the feasibility of fighting a limited nuclear war, he has recently endorsed a series of proposals that seem to move the administration in the direction of

One of these, the plan to bolster the nation's civil defenses against ouclear attack, has just begun to stimulate controversy in and out of government. Others, such as buildiog a new generation of larger, more accurate interconfinental missiles, are likely to spur widespread

Io essence, the effect of these initiatives is to call into question the longstanding coocept that the most effective way to deter any Soviet nuclear strike is to threaten huge and instant retaliation against Soviet cities and factories. Contending that Moscow may not accept this concept of mutual deterrence, supporters of a shift in strategic policy made clear that they seek a new emphasis on being able to fight a small-scale ouclear war with Moscow, a conflict that some suggest could go on for weeks or even months and would not necessarily lead to the devastation of U.S. and Soviet cities.

For some time, military analysts, particularly in the Defense Department, bave maiotaided that egy has just begue and bureaucratic battle lines are only one being Moscow's nuclear forces were designed to fight a limited war and that the Soviet Union's civil de-According to officials involved in and to defend against Soviet counterstrikes. Thus, in the early 1970s. these analysts pushed for more accurate offensive missiles and the deployment of an antiballistic missile defense system.

Before entering the White House, Mr. Carter expressed doubts about the concept of limited war, and Mr. Brown, in his first annual defense report last year, presented similar views. But officials report that pressure has gradually huilt up in various parts of the government for the administration to modify this position.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (NYT) - President Carter announced yes-terday that a ceiling of $8.43 billion would be put on the tntal value of U.S. arms sales to nations not al-lied to the United States in the 1979 fiscal year — a modest reduc-tion from this year's total.

Mr. Carter said the cut would represent an 8 percent reduction, or 5733 million, from the 1978 fiscalyear total. But he arrived at this figure by using a bookkeeping method that took into account the impact of inflation. A simple comparison of the fiscal 1978 and the fiscal 1979 total shows a decrease of naly $117 million

Thus, while Mr. Carter has again reduced sales to unallied countries. the administration is likely to come in for criticism from those on Capi-

N.Y. Post Stops Sunday Edition

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 (NYT) -The New York Post announced yesterday that it would suspend publication of its eight-week-old Sunday edition.

Rupert Murdoch, publisher of the Post, said in a statement that the paper would not be issued "until we are able to assemble all the elements of a full Sunday paper and, secondly, satisfactory agreements are reached with all unions."

The Sunday paper, planned by the Post for some time, first appeared Oct. 8, while a strike connued at The New York Times and the Daily News. Mr. Murdoch had withdrawn from joint oegotiations between the publishers of the three newspapers and the pressmen's union and reached a separate settlearms exports are still too high.

Mr. Carter's ceiling is a self-imposed one. Under law, however, the administration must send plans for specific transactions to Congress. which has 30 days to disapprove them if it wishes. In a statement released by the White Hnuse vesterday afternoon, Mr. Carter said he was "pleased to announce that this government has kept its pledge in take the leader-ship in restraining arms sales." In a clear reference to continuing U.S. military support for Israel, he added that the cut "was consistent with our national security interests, ineluding our historic interest in the security of the Middle East."

At the same time, he indicated that the administration could not continue its restraint policy indefi-nitely without other arms exporters following suit. Accordingly, he said the administration was not making a "maximum effort" to achieve the cooperation of other major arms suppliers. He went on;

"My decision oo American arms transfer levels for fiscal year 1980 will depend on the degree of cooperation we receive in the coming year from other oations, particularly in the area of specific achieve-ments and evidence of concrete progress on arms transfer

So far, the administration has not succeeded in getting its major competitors in the arms trade. Britain. France and the Soviet Unioo. to join it in cutting back on sales, Early last year, Paris and London informed Mr. Carter that they would not restrain exports until Washington was able to convince

Moscow to go along with the idea. The administration began negotiations with Moscow late last year and a round of talks on arms restraint is scheduled oext month in Mexicn City. Although Soviet leaders seemed originally cool to the idea. State Department aides report that Moscow has shown more interest in some type of accord restrict-ing exports to Latin America and possibly other regions.

The possibility of a Soviet-U.S. agreement on arms sales, officials said, has thus prompted Mr. Carter to press London and Paris once again in cut back on exports. Despite these developments several aides expressed doubt over the ability of the administration to get other military exporters in exercise genuine restraint in the immediate

As a result, they said that Mr. Carter's ceiling for fiscal 1979 could be the last. One reason is that the administration is coming under heavy pressure from domestic arms producers to remove the ceiling.

Italian cars drive better than other cars. Not as good as, Better

Cars, like people, have national characteristics too. And Italian cars are generally known for the way they drive. The reason for this is simple. As a nation, Italy has won more races and rallies than any other people.

And it stands to reason that a country that loves to race would produce a different kind of car than a country that does not.

And because of this, the Fiat Group, which includes Lancia and Ferrari, has spent many years concentrating on just how well our cars steer, brake, accelerate and feel the road. But racing is not the only reason Italian cars drive the way they do. Italy is 1/3 mountains, more than any other car-producing nation in Europe.

And of 291,000 kilometres of roads, 5,500 are autostrade. So much of the driving in Italy is over difficult roads.

And these conditions demand a car that, above all else, handles exceptionally well. So the "drive" is the most important thing in an Italian car. But it isn't the only thing Italians are fanatics about. At Fiat, for example, we coat each car body with 15-18 kg of paint and corrosion-preventing material; there isn't much that can get through proof paint, primer coat and enamel finish. We've spent over one billion lire in the past three years for noise test equipment. Through a layer of phosphatizing, an anti-rust coat, stone-

a sophisticated test in which the car's basic units are inspected under a laser beam, we've reduced the amount of interior noise by 50%.

In the area of production quality control, the Fiat 131, for example, can undergo up to 8,000 different inspections. The inspections carried out on each 131 take an average of 9 hours and 20 minutes.

And every Fiat prototype must pass a special rust-resistance test, which simulates 100,000 km of driving under the worst climatic conditions. Still, the most important thing to us is how the car drives. Because, after all, thai's what a car is for. We've even rejected the entire design of one of our prototypes because it didn't drive like an Italian car.

Other countries have tried to copy this certain "Italian feel."

Car makers from all over Europe have tried to hire away Italian designers and engineers.

And many European cars are half-Italian as it is: they're designed by free-lance Italian

But, be that as it may, only Italy can produce an Italian car.

And since the whole point of a car is to drive it, shouldn't you be driving an Italian car?

Based on an formula agreed upoo by Burma and Bangladesh, in which 2,000 refugees were to return every third day, the number should have been 50,000.

The refugees Robiogyea

The refugees, Rohiogyea Moslems, fled across the 150-mile border to predomioantly Moslem Bangladesh, claiming that Moslems had been murdered, raped and imprisoned hy the Burmese Army and Buddhist gangs in the Arakan. Bangladesh claims that 225,000 fled; Burma puts the number at 140,000.

Burma Denied Atrocities

The Rangooo government, denying any atrocities or religious prejudice, said that the problem resulted from a nationwide sweep for illegal immigrants and smugglers, of whom the Arakan has traditionally had large numbers who had left impoverished Bangladesh. The round-resources of two of the world's poorest nations. There are 11 refugee camps in Bangladesh and 10 reception centers in Burma, supported by the respective national gov-ernments, international agencies and in Bangladesh, by donors that include the United States, Australia, Canada, and several Western European and Middle Eastern nations.

"The Burmese have set up very good reception centers and our impression is that there is a tremendous amount of will to make the operation a success despite great difficulties," said George Gordon-Lennox, the UN high commissioner for refugees representative in Rangoon.

Tensions in Camps

The Moslems' reluctance to return apparently stems from lears of what might awair them in the Arakan, as well as from tensions within the refugee community in Bangla-desh. After the repatriation agree-ment in July, about 10,000 refugees slipped from the camps to thwart attempts to return them, according to officials in Dacca.

Bangladesh Home Minister Mus-tafizur Rahman said last week that at least 15 persons had been killed in the camps recently by police forced to fire when, on three occasions, some of those returning to Burma were attacked by other refugee groups with weapons. Sources to Rangoon say that some extreme Moslem Burmese leaders are seek-ing to sabotage the repatriation to better organize a Moslem insurgent movement among the refugees.

Air Controller in Worst U.S. Crash Says He Misunderstood Jet Pilot

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 30 (UPI) -The last air traffic controller to communicate with a commercial airliner involved in the nation's worst aviation disaster admitted yesterday that he misunderstood a key transmission from the pilot a minute before the collision.

The pilot of the Pacific Southwest Airlines Boeing 727, descendwest Airmes Boeing 121, descending rapidly on his approach to Lindbergh Field Sept. 25, radioed the control tower: "Think he's passing off to the right," in an apparent reference to a single engine Cessna which the pilot previously had been warned about.

But Alian Saville, who assumed control of the plane only 66 sec-onds before the collision, admitted that he did oot hear the pilot's nearly inaudible word, "think," and therefore, believed that the pilot had positively seen the Cessna. Mr. Saville then cleared the PSA lane to land and seconds later th airliner, which apparently had failed to see the small plane ascending in the final moments, smashed into it and plummeted into a residential neighborhood.

The death toll of 144 persons, including all those aboard the two planes and seven persons oo the ground, was the worst air disaster in U.S. history.

Iranian Army Seizes Weapons In Two Towns

TEHRAN, Nov. 30 (UPI) — The army said yesterday it had seized weapons caches in two riot-torn franian towns, amid warnings by authorities that anti-shah demoostrators were preparing to spark a civil war.

Carter's Policies May Be Debated At Party Meeting

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP) - The Democratic Party's executive committee agreed yesterday to a rules change that will open the oational party conference oext month to more debate on President Carter's policies.

Rep. Donald Fraser, D-Minn.,
the chairman of the liberal Democratic Conference, called the rules change "a significant concession." The change guarantees a period of open debate on the convention loor no later than the morning of Dec. 10, the last day of the three day "miniconvention."

The party's liberal wing, which has been pushing internal reforms for the past decade, had complained that the original rules and conference schedule had limited any chance for open debate and possible dissent.

Democratic National Chairman

John White of Texas, who negotiat ed the essential compromise with Rep. Fraser, denied there had been any attempt to stifle debate, calling it a matter of procedure.

Mr. Carter is scheduled to address the meeting Dec. 9 after a day of workshops. Vice President Wal-ter Mondale will speak the followring morning.

Slipping Away

The year when so much was to he decided about the future of blacks and whites in southern Africa is drawing to a close and nothing has happened. Nothing at least that might, in Western eyes, be viewed as progress toward a reasonable and peaceful settlement of the future. Everywhere things have remained as they were or have slipped back-

A modest new effort, it is true, has been launched toward the rigging up of another Rhodesia conference. Britain has sent an emissary in the form of Cledwyn Hughes on a reporting tour of Rhodesia, South Africa and the front-line States to determine what the sentimeots are toward such a gathering of all interested parties. He will he talking to the front-line chiefs of state, the leaders of the Patriotic Front and Ian Smith. He will also visit Pretoria to see what the temperature is there.

Meanwhile, the South African authorities will he cooducting their own private electioo in South-West Africa, or Namihia, to set things straight their way before the United Nations can organize its free election some time oext year. These questions are quite distinct from each other, as diplomats enjoy pointing out. But in the public mind, Africa south of the 16th parallel is coovulsed by one hroad issue only — the struggle hetween a ruling white minority and an oppressed black majority.

Rhodesia is, of course, the most immediate and most dangerous theater of conflict. Mr. Smith's "internal settlement" was supposed to initiate a gradual integration of hlacks into the government until a fair proportion of representation was reached. This plan has run into the expected obstacles, not the least of which is the guerrilla war being carried on by Patriotic Front leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo. On the other side, another black figure, Bishop Muzorewa, who hacks the Smith plan, sees his credit disappeariog in the face of delays in implementing the settlement at home and general hostility to it in the outside world.

The British and Americans have made repeated and unsuccessful attempts to come to an international arrangement which would satisfy all concerned without much success. Mr. Hughes' journey signifies another try, but there is little reason to think that the minds of Mr. Smith or the Patriotic Front have changed in recent months. Everything and everyooe are still oo collision course.

About the only consolation is the evidence that the Russians and the Cuhans are still largely onlookers. The Patriotic Front has accepted Soviet arms — they would accept arms from anyone — hut so far they have avoided any direct political connectioo with Moscow or Havana. Such a connection, however, remains a real threat, and rightly so, in the calculations of Western diplomats. Just because the Russians have been unsuccessful in other parts of Africa does not preclude their interference in this fertile region.

But the real source of discouragement is still South Africa itself. Years of threats and pleadings oo the part of Western leaders of every possible complexion have had no practical effect. The South Africans are staking all on the chance they can successfully ignore the evolution of mankind in the last half of the 20th Ceotury, of its morals as well as its politics. To everyone else their power and the policies they apply it to seem to be surely slipping away. But not to them.

In spite of the gloomy trend in U.S. exports and imports this fall, it still seems likely that this country's enormous trade deficit will shrink next year. The figures for October were unexpectedly bad; imports set a new record, and exports actually declined. This year's exports will fall more than $30 billion short of halancing the goods and materials that the United States buys abroad. But events seem likely to push toward better performance next year. Certainly this country has an urgent interest in getting that deficit down.

When a foreign-trade deficit is both large and persistent, it begins to have sette sequences for the way things work at bome. The trade deficit pushes down the exchange rate of the dollar, which in turn contributes to inflation. At the same time, a large deficit acts as a brake on the growth of the U.S. economy. Because it takes purchasing power out of the country, its effect is the opposite of a federal budget deficit's. That, in fact, is one of the reasons for the very large hudget deficits of the past couple of years. The administratioo has been using federal spending to offsel the effects, on jobs and prosperity. of exports that fall far short of paying for the couotry's imports.

Why expect that deficit to decline in the months ahead? One reason is that the current economic expansion in the United States is slackening off, possibly with a recessioo ahead. Meanwhile, West Germany seems to be moving into a modest boom. That will cut both the U.S. trade deficit and the West German surplus.

The fall of the U.S. dollar makes U.S. goods cheaper ahroad. That helps expand exports. Unfortunately, the impact has been neither as rapid oor as widespread as most people had expected. It turns out that a country cannot rely on small changes in currency values to keep its international accounts automatically balanced. That has been one of the surprises in the past five years' experience with floating exchange rates. The explanation for it cao be seen in the way people buy automobiles. If a foreign car meets a certain taste, and its maker bas earned a reputation for reliability, its sales will hold up fairly well even if a falling dollar makes that car more expensive. Some customers will turn elsewhere, but not all of them and not immediately. The same thing happens in all kinds of machinery and manufactured goods.

In any forecasts of U.S. foreign trade, there are two big question marks. One-fifth of U.S. exports are agricultural products, and their sales depend beavily on weather and barvests abroad. They also depend on the decisions by the rulers of the two big Communist countries regarding the standards of nutrition for their people. More meat and bread for Soviet and Chinese tables means higher prices for U.S. corn and wheat - and a further reduction in the U.S. trade deficit. On the other side of the ledger, this country's biggest import is, of course, oil. OPEC is about to raise its prices, and higher prices will widen the deficit.

That is the paradox of interdependence. High and rising volumes of foreign trade and investment make people richer around the world. But the process costs every government a degree of influence over money, prices and jobs in its own country. Governments promise their citizens both prosperity and stability, and then discover both of them threatened hy international trends that no government can control.

There are two kinds of response. One is protectionism. It's wrong in principle and costly in practice. The other possibility is the rapid development of international trading rules and worldwide financial institutions strong enough to stabilize the flows of goods and mooey within tolerable limits. If the present forecasts are correct, and the U.S. trade deficit is now diminishing, the United States will shortly be relieved of a dangerous and distracting kind of economic pressure. But that relief will be only temporary, unless this country and its partners make progress toward international systems that can guide and contain the next turn of the cycle.

The $13 per month now given to the common soldier is sufficient as a start. But the problem is to attract men of real capacity and ambition. The Old Men in the Kremlin

By Leopold Unger

BRUSSELS — Kirill Mazurov has just been removed from the Polithuro, but not "for reasons of health and at his request," notwithstanding the announcement by

Mr. Mazurov, 64, is oot in any worse health than most of his peers. Quite to the cootrary, it is President Leonid Brezhnev, 71, and Premier Alexei Kosygin, 73, who are sick and who had to leave their posts in the Kremlin for long periods of coovalescence. And it is thanks only to the recent progress in medicine that they are able to fulfill their heavy responsibilities.

Only two years ago, Mr. Mazurov was coosidered one of the "younger" members of the Polithuro and a possible heir to Mr. Kosygin. But then his star began to fade. Nikolai Tikhonov, born in 1905, named first deputy premie thus putting an end to any possibility of promotion for Mr. Mazurov.

Ideal Scapegoat

Mr. Mazurov's downfall was made public at the same time as Mr. Tikhonov's promotion to the post of alternate on the Politburo and the nomination of Konstantin Chemenko, 67, as full member of the group; and that was the veritahe purpose of the whole operation.
Both Mr. Tikhonov and Mr. Chernenko are reputedly close to Mr.
Brezhnev, while Mr. Mazurov is said 10 have had some differences of opinion with the Soviet presideni in the past. Under those coo-ditions, Mr. Mazurov was the ideal scapegoat.

As was the case of Dimitri Polianski, who in 1973 was made to bear the hurden for the failure of Soviet agriculture, Mr. Mazurov is being made to pay the bill for the "unacceptable practices" in indus-try and agriculture that Mr. Brezhnev denounced in the last plenary session of the Central Committee. Above all, he is being made to pay for the food shortage throughout the Soviet Union.

The changes announced during the night of Monday-Tuesday really change nothing. The average age of the members of the Polithuro, the core of political power in the Soviel Union, went up, not down, and now is at 68. It is the oldest group of men ever to rule the Soviet Union, men who all started their careers under Stalin.

Khrushchev Rivals

When the late Premier Nikita Khrushchev wanted in do away with possible rivals he eliminated men of his generation and promoted a younger group, who would thus remain loyal to him for as long as possible. When they got rid of Khrushchev in 1964, Mr. Brezhnev and Mr. Kosygin already were big men in the Kremlin, but they were less than 60 years old.

Today, the opposite is taking place. Within the last five years, the younger men were fired: Alexander Shelepin, 60, Mr. Polianski, 68, and Konstantin Katushev, who was 59, when he was "kicked upstairs" from the Central Committee to Comecon Fydor Kulakov died last summer at 60. These men were replaced by Vassili Kuznetsov, 77, Mr. Tikhonov. 77 and Mr. Chernenko, who at 67 is the youngest of the new rulers.

But all these changes were meant to serve only one purpose, to reinforce the Brezhnev clan. The Soviet president hardly needs more proof of his political preponderance, when all the responsibilities inher-ent to the posts he occupies are already far beyond his current canacily. A country as powerful and demographically young as the Sovi-ei Union may sooo ask itself if it can trust a group of tired and sick old men who simply refuse to as-sure their succession credibly and quietly.

It appears difficult to understand that a nation of 260 million inhab-itants, 90 percent of whom are less than 59 years old - and 38 percent less than 19 years old — cannot find dynamic and forward-looking young men to place at its head.

Mr. Brezhnev is more powerful now than he has ever been and the problems of the Brezhnev succession are more serious and compli-cated oow than they have ever been. And while the ruling group in the Kremlin controls the immense power of the nation, the question arises if it will know how to use that power to meet the most dan-gerous challenge it has faced in years, that of Nicolae Ceausescu at the recent Warsaw Pact summit conference in Moscow.

The Kremlin tried everything it could do before the summit to con-vince the Romanian chief of state to see things its way. Last month, it sent the head of the Warsaw Pact forces on a "friendship visit" to Bucharest, and that trip was followed by an unprecedented delega-tion headed by Andrei Gromyko, the foreign minister, who traveled abroad for the first time as a memher of the Politburo.

Despite all these measures of persuasion, Mr. Ceausescu rejected Soviet proposals in Moscow both in the diplomatic field (referring to the Middle East) as well as in the military sphere.

He refused to increase his military expenditures (there is no im-pending danger of war, he said) and to take up the Soviet side in its conflict with China and over help-ing Vietnam. He declared that the Romanian Army would never serve under foreign orders.

The Romanian "dissidence" did not start this month in Moscow. Romania was the only member of the Warsaw Pact to have convinced the Kremlin toward the end of the 1950s that the presence of Soviet troops on its national soil was not an absolute necessity, and that the fidelity of the Bucharest regime was beyond suspicion. Furthermore, it said, the withdrawal of Soviet troops would only enforce Soviet-Romanian friendship and allow Moscow to make some large sav-

As soon as the last Soviet soldier had left Romania, Bucharest went tn work. Careful ant to push too far and maintaining a neo-Stalinist re-gime internally, Bucharest began to act independently in international matters.

It was the only country to have refused to bold Warsaw Pact maneuvers on its scil: it was the first of the group to establish diplomatic relations with West Germany and it was the only Eastern European state to have kept its diplomatic ties with Israel after the Six Day War of 1967. But above all, Mr. Ceausescu was the only Warsaw Pact head of state to have kept his troops home when five other members invaded Czechoslovakia in 1968. At that time, he even refused to allow Bulgarian troops the right to cross Romania, forcing them to go to Odessa hy sea before march-ing on to Prague.

But on his return from Moscow this time, Mr. Ceansescu went fur-ther than ever before. Previously, whatever he did, be did it discreetly; today, he has made his quarrel with the Soviet Union a public matter while launching an unprecedented campaign against Soviet pressure.

Yet, Mr. Ceausescu is much less isolated — even in the East — than could be expected and Moscow, therefore, will have to act quickly to stop the "Romanian disease" before it contaminates others. The type of Soviet reaction will depend on the wisdom of the men in the Kremlin. Mr. Ceausescu is no Dubcek and the world today is not the same as it was in 1968; but the rulers of the Kremlin - and there's the ruh - have only little changed. powerful European economy, and

German Challenge: Problem of Europe Com

By William Pfaff

PARIS — The problem of Europe has been the problem of Germany for more than a century. Three wars, each one worse than the last, have been fought because the united Germany which Bismarck put together in the 1860s would not or could not live peace-fully within the Europe which it dominated. Its power unbalanced the continent. By 1945 it took mohilization of most of the rest of the industrialized nations of the world to put Germany down and finally to partition it, undoing Bismarck's

That challenge of Germany re-cently has been raised again in France, in the politest way, by French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing. Telling the French that they should work to overtake West Germany's economie and industrial power during the next 15 years, Giscard d'Estaing said that it would be "unacceptable" that Western Europe be dominated by a single country. For Europe to be secure, there must be at least two countries of comparable power, he said; and France today is the only candidate for the joh of counterbal-ance to the West German economy.

New Version

The problem of West Germany is, in fact, mainly economic today, a new version of the old problem. But also, since the problem exists in a new geopolitical dimension, it has become a problem with a solution. This ought to make Germans, as well as everyone else, happy. But that new geopolitical dimension is the division of Germany, and thus the solution is not welcome to all Germans, of East or West. The discussion of the question outside Germany, and even inside, is therefore something less than candid. There is possibly too much polite-

In short, World War II settled a fundamental European issue, admittedly at ghasily cost. It settled the problem of Germany hy dismembering the country, handing Pomerania and Prussia over to Poland and the Soviet Union, and partitioning what was left. The outcome was a West German state able and anxious to live in peace and cooperation with its neighbors. Nature and economic trends continued that reduction of West Germany to West European scale which war and politics began, as population, birth rate, and GNP have been converging with those of West Germany's main neighbors. It ought to be a reassuring situation. The outlook is tranquil — so long as Germany remains partitioned.

While West Germany fits comwhile West Germany his comfortably into Western Europe, a united Germany would oot. The German Democratic Republic is not itself a particularly powerful state or dynamic economy. But its industrial weight and its population would make a critical difference of would make a critical difference of scale. The two existing German states together add up to a popula-tion of nearly 80 million with a combined GNP (oo World Bank calculations) around one and a half times that of France, the next most twice that of Britain Such a co bined German industrial econo would also be some three-quan

The truth today is that what he made possible West Germany role as trusted and valued mente of the European Community. indeed made possible the prince indeed made possible the prince itself, is that this is post Bisment an Germany and the right size log into a West European role: What the West German economy took is West European's biggest and the prince it still is not unresemble. best, it still is not unreasonably of scale with its neighbor. To West German advantage on France (also its principal traditions) now is so small that if a casualished Franch lead in coording growth rates is maintained at a average rates of the last 20 was the two economies will draw earwell before the end of the central control of well before the end of the cents to this that Giscard d'Estaing a talking about. And France also enjoys an advantage in cen high-technology fields where w Germany remains under poli inhibitions, such as aerospace nuclear energy. White West Germany is the most populous of the West Germany is the most populous of the West Germany is not great. There are 60 lion West Germans. Italy and United Kingdom both have populations of 56 million. France nearly 53 million. West German in the European Community, among equals.

Out of this emerges an object conclusion. No one outside Gene ny has an interest in Germany unification. In fact, every involved, except the Germans is a positive interest in continued in tition — most of all the Poles as Russiana. And the reason it as necessarily that the war has left? memories, or that any serious on cern is justified over German polici cal instability or extremism toda; It mainly is a matter of simple or nomic an geopolitical calculation;

At some point, the implication of this will have to be faced, income of all in West Germany income. where unification is still heldwith more or less enthusiasm = be a valid oational objective politics, as in families, inchide the European family, there at. some contradictions it is better, ignore. But as the European Chi munity oow moves toward bother largement and its first popular elected assembly, the contradic in the West German situation h comes more troubling. In fact, 68 man unification is scarcely image nable so long as Soviet mini-power remains in East Genile and Eastern Europe. The practice possibilities for change would see nil, in the foresecable future, & this is exactly the contradiction Some West Germans still are los ing for something which in practic is, by reasonable standards, instainable. They want to achies something which both their biast and their enemies oppose (or en fear), and which, if it were son how to come about, would fatdul unbalance that West Europe Community which is one of the great postwar achievements.

A reporter for The Washingtoo Post asked Lane about his personal responsibility for what happened at Jonestown. He answered that concerned relatives of the commune members had known far more than he about conditions there. But Jim Jones and his lawyers had tried to discredit the worried relatives when they asked for an investigation, the reporter noted. Lane said: "If they weren't crazy, they wouldn't have been discredited."

Larger Question

Under the lawyers' code of pro-fessional responsibility, a lawyer is not obliged to keep the confidences of a client who discloses an intention to commit future crimes. So Lane may have some more explaining to do in investigations of Jonestown, civil damage suits or har pro-

Atlantic City Neighbors Feuding After Offer to Buy Whole Block

ATLANTIC CITY, NJ. (AP) — It's neighbor against oeighbor oo a block of boardwalk beachfront after a real-estate agent, thought to be representing a mysterious casino hotel developer, offered to pay homeowners $100,000 each for their property—but only if all agree to sell.

Sixty of the 72 homeowners on the block bounded by Boardwalk and Texas, Bellevue and Pacific Avenues are willing to take the $100,000, according to local real-estate man Richard Bloom. Homes sold recently in the area went for about $40,000.

Mr. Bloom said he made the offer two months ago on behalf of Jean Savage of Nutley, N.J., and Ruth Spector of Queens, N.Y., the listed owners of HEJJ, Inc. of Nutley. There is speculation that HEJJ represents potential, but unnamed, casino developer.

"You can see the overwhelming majority of the people want to sell," said Rita DeNota, a Texas Avenue homeowner who circulated a petition from those who want to sell, urging holdouts to join the deal. "Some of them — a lot of the old people — are doing it for sentiment and jazz like that," she said. "But most of them are . . . just greedy, that's all."

Bernard and Lillian Klempfner were the first to oppose the offer publicly. Mrs. Klempfner, who is confined to a wheelchair, has easy access to the boardwalk from their house on a small alley off Texas Avenue. "Ever-ytime you'd see some of these people," Mr. Klempfner said, "it was the same thing - 'Did you sign yet?' You'd think it was a matter of life and death. I have to tell you that the same people who used to be my friends I now dislike intensely. That's a terrible thing,"

Gertrude Pruzan, who has lived on Bellevue Avenue for all of her 55 years, is another of the holdouts. "I just don't want to give them my house, to tell the truth," she said. "This is my place and I want to keep it. If I sell, it'll be so someone can move in, not tear the place down."

FTC Study Urges Ban on Term 'Health Food' in Ads

By Larry Kramer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (WP) - A long-awaited study by the Federal Trade Commission has recommended that the term "health food" be banned from all food advertising. It said there was oo such thing as bealth food.

In its report, released Tuesday, the FTC staff recommended restrictions on "unfair or deceptive" advertising of food relative to ou-trition and health.

The proposed rule, which will be subject to public comment for 60 days before the commission takes it up for consideration, calls for major limitations as to what food companies — which spent $1.3 billion on advertising in 1977 — can say about their products.

The food industry withheld comment on the proposal until it had a chance to study the report.

"The rulemaking record indicates that advertising which fails to provide adequate nutrition information has resulted in widespread consumer confusion about such terms as energy, diet, natural, organic, and health," The FTC said. The staff report made recom-mendations in four areas:

 When foods are promoted as providing "food energy," or as a "diet" food, "advertisements must disclose the oumber of calories in stated servings of the foods," the staff proposed. "This section would prohibit certain false claims about the value of foods and nutrients as sources of energy,"

The staff said that any ads containing "food energy" claims would have to define "food energy" as merely meaning that the food pro-

 Any advertisements that discuss the fat, fatty acid, and choles-terol content of food would, under the staff proposal, have to "disclose information necessary to enable the public to understand and evaluate the claim.

Donegan explained that it would be acceptable under the new rules, for example, if an advertisement for a low-cholesterol margerine said that "no single food can stop heart disease" but went on to extol the benefits of a low-cholesterol diet.

 The report said that the terms "natural." "organie" and "health" "are currently used in misleading ways and are often misunderstood

Consequently, the staff recom-mended that advertisers be banned from usiog "natural" if the food, or any of its ingredients has been more than minimally processed, or if it contains any artificial or syn-thetic ingredient. "Organic" also would be forbidden if the food was grown with certain types of fertilizers or if artificial or synthetic substances, such as pesticides, were applied to it. As for the term "health food," the FTC staff felt that the term should be banned entirely "because it cannot be defined or qualified in

Theater in France

An Airy Production of Moliere in Nice

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

DARIS. Nov. 30 (1HT) - Jean-Louis Thamin, a bright, young metteur-en-scene and known here for his scintillating stagings of Marivaux's "L'lle de la Raison" at the Comedie-Française and Crebillon Fils' "La Nuit et Le Moment" nt the Petit Odeon, has been appointed manager of the Nouveau Theatre of Nice. He has made his debut with another triumph. His initial production there — Moliere's "L'Etourdi" — again discloses his charming, airy manner of bringing a classic to the boards.

Derivation

"L'Etourdi" was Moliere's first play, or his earliest to have been preserved. Written in his wagon days, it was probably conceived, in the opinion of his 20th-century follower. Maurice Donnay, afoot or on horseback along the highroad, and dashed down on paper at odd moments in wayside inns. This strolling mummer played it first on his far-flung travels, but later when he reached Paris it was an immedi-

According to D.B. Wyndham Lewis, it is derived from Nicolo Barbieri's "L'Inavvertido," with a glance or two at Luigi Groto's Emilia." Certainly its central fig-ure, the double-dealing Mascarille, is a relative of those valet-tricksters of whom contemporaneous Italian theater was so fond. But the play's roots may be deeper: Mascarille, in uttering his exulting cry, "Viva Marcarillus, fourburn imperator!" beirays a classical education that links him to the comic slave of Terence and Plautus.

The story is of scenano simplicity. The title applies to the hero, Lelie, a conceited and scatterbrained fellow, always doing the wrong thing at the right moment. His father would marry him to Hippolyte, the daughter of a friend, but Lelie is in love with a slave girl, owned by the crafty Trufaldin and coveted, too, by a rival.

to deliver to his master the willing slave. But no sooner has he put some adroit scheme into action to unite the lovers than the oafish Lelie upsets it with his incurable stupidity. Mascarille, muttering his comic disgust, is ready to give up in despair. Yet, being inexhaustibly inventive, he is coaxed back to

> This rogue of a valet became a stock fixture of Moliere comedy and be is, of course, the ancestor of Beaumarchais' Figaro and of all the manservants in atriped-waistcoat livery who have been present in force down to our day.

Rousing Romp

Thamin's mise-en-scene has animated the text into a rousing romp. It has the free-wheeling style of the commedia dell'arte, which lends an exhilarating spontageity. It is acted at full speed and without intermis-sion before Patrice Cauchetier's fanciful decor, a summerhouse on high stills, the lair of the cunning Trufaldin and the slave girl's pris-on. full of pleasing color.

Moliere wrote "L'Etourdi" for himself, and provided himself with the best part — indeed, the only part that has much substance. The others are traditional comedy marionettes: the old fathers, the young lovers, the scheming rival as a foil and the cooniving trader. Lelie is somewhat individualized by a fatheadness that takes lively jumps in its course but that inevitably flows in the same direction, a sort of running gag.

Roland Blanche, the Mascarille of the occasion, is a brilliant elown, hilarious in both his devious dealing and in his exasperation when his plans are crossed. Jean-Jacques Delbo and Paul Chevalier as the staunch parents, Monique Brun as the woold captive, Cathy Berger as the scorned fiancee and Robert Condamin as the gruff jailer enter with contagious enthusiasm into the spirit of the frolic; and there are no blank spots or slackenings of pace during the evening's two-hour traffic. A Fiery but Unconvincing Updating of 'Tempest'

By John Walker

L ONDON, Nov. 30 ((HT) — Michael Bogdanov's modern-dress production of Shake-speare's The Tempest" at the Young Vic is the best in his unconvincing "Action Men" sequeoce, which yokes it together with "Richard II" and "Hamlet" as a trilogy about the struggle for power.

The reduction of the plays to such a simple theme achieves a certain clarity, but at the expense of any poetic dimension. Although this matters most in "The Tempest," Bogdanov's fussy updating of the plays is here less obtrustve (Prospero's island is, after all, out of time), although he has still wielded his though he has still wielded his axe — lopping the work so that it emerges as a dream of failure.

Prospero is, literally, the still center of the opening storm an aging exile io slightly shabby clothes, sitting at a cafe table with a bottle of red wine, some French bread and cheese, and dreaming of what might have been. He remains at his little table for most of the play, while the action swirls around him.

Restrained Action

One effect of this is to restrain the physical action of the play. The shipwreck is a static affair, ployed out by a group of stationary, chanting figures, and the boisterous comedy of Trinculo and Stephano is confined to the periphery of the stage.

It is clear that the action is no more than an old man's idle fan-tasy. That may be a possible ap-proach to the play, and Bog-danov quotes io his program oote the view of a psychiatrist. Anthony Ryle, that "one import-ant way of regarding the play is Prospero's dream."

But Boodanov poet further more than an old man's idle fan-

But Bogdanov goes further,

perversely destroying the play's final moments of reconciliation and acceptance. At the end, when Prospero brings together the disparate groups and explains his purpose, the others ignore him, turn their backs and talk among themselves. His final "Please you, draw near" is a despairing cry: everyone deserts, leaving him totally alone.

Bogdanov's conclusion — that men are not changed by experience, that men will continue to do the evil they do and that mamirity is a dream — quite de-stroys Shakespeare a barmony. The verse suffers similarly.

The actors adopt a steamroller approach, flatteoing it as much as possible. Bill Wellis, looking a little like Ibsen, gives a tetchy, gruff delivery to Prospero's lines. Stephen Boxer is an excellent Ariel, with a clear bell-like voice, although for some reason he appears as a public schoolboy in

Vienna's Losers Are Seldom Weepers

TIENNA, Nov. 30 (UPI) - Not V many Austrian finders are keepers and less than half the losers are weepers - thanks to the finderlohn. An Austrian institution since 1867, the finderloin is a finder's fee or reward; it is set by law at 10 per, cent of the value of the lost object. The enticement to honesty works. Next to the Chinese the Austrians are probably the most diligent "returners" in the world. Carrying ao odd array of women's purses, animals, umbrellas and spare tires, Austria's good citizens stream daily into the lost-andfound warehouse behind the Vien-oa opera ball. Josef Eckel, the bureau's director, says that more than 30,000 items found in the capital are turned into his office annu-

An inventory of finds from a recent 90-day period includes: 1,534 keys, 775 umbrellas, 372 wallets, 254 wristwatches, 220 pairs of gloves, 180 pairs of eyeglasses, 168 screwdrivers, 153 women's hand-bags and 76 bicycles.

Not to mention 60 boxes of faci-al tissues. 72 record albums, 19 suitcases full of clothes, 17 footballs, six knapsacks, five pistols and three baby carriages. The baby carriages were empty." said Eckel with obvious relief. In the past three mooths, the de-partment bad also received 152 dogs, 43 cats, 24 tropical birds, 17 horning pigeons, five rabbits, two crows, n duck, a buzzard, a weasel, a squirrel, a falcon and a heron.

Eckel claims he doesn't consider a lost heron so unusual. "You wouldn't believe," be also said. "the number of pairs of dentures people lose." A tour of unclaimed objects demonstrates that many people are confused over what a valid find is. "Austrians are as thrifty as they are honest." said Vice-Director Robert Feliner as he led the way through stacks of worn-out but carefully tagged brooms and blown TV tubes. They don't like to see anything go to waste."

One finder turned in a brown paper bag containing $70,000 worth of various currencies. The money was claimed by a Polish citizen who, unlike many other people, was only too happy to pay the finderlohn," said Eckel. "We did think it was a bit curious about the paper bag, but if you can describe your property to our satisfaction we don't ask questions."

Eckel estimates that a loser in Austria bas better than a 50 perceot chance of regaining his property.

"Unfortunately, only a third of the valuable items turned in are ever claimed," be said. "We think many of the unclaimed things belong to lourists who don't know this office exists or don't think they have a chance of gelting their prop-erry back so don't bother to check." But Fellner cited recent cases of two tourists who did take the trouble to visit his office.

"One Dutch woman lost her purse with two diamond rings and a pair of earnings inside worth he recalled. "They were right here waiting for her.

"A Thai lady got back a subv bracelet. I'm sure it was worth 30,000 shillings, but it was ap-praised at only 18,000, so she was lucky and paid a low finderlohn."

After a year, unclaimed items are returned to the fioder, who holds

Coin May Prove Norsemen Knew America First

LONDON, Nov. 30 (UPI) - A British coin expert said that he has found what may be "the first tangi-ble evidence" that Norsemen discovered America 400 years before Columbus.

Soybean Prices Seen Peaking as Supplies Grow

CHICAGO, Nov. 30 (AP-DJ) -Soybean prices appear to bave peaked after a sharp run-up that began in early August, analysts say. Growth in demand for the key oilseed seems to be slowing, while supplies appear to be headed for further abundance, they observe.

For the first time since sovbean prices skyrocketed out of their traditional trading range six years ago, "production could exceed the growth in demand," says Ray Danagricultural economics director Chase Econometric Associates Inc., a Chase Manhattan corp.

Overseas customers for U.S. soybeans "are well supplied," and Bra-zil, the key competitor for export orders, "is very well planted" with its new crop, says Walter Greenspan, senior commodity economist for Shearson Hayden Stone. He predicts that U.S. farmers will sell soybeans into the market whenever prices seem to be rising, and he notes that U.S. export sales orders have trailed year-earlier levels during the past few weeks.

U.S. farmers harvested a record

1.81 billion busbels of soybeans this autumn, enough to displace wheat as the second biggest crop in the country; corn is still by far the biggest. Moreover, analysts say, some hefty 1979 production inereases appear likely both in the United States and in Brazil, respectively the world's largest and sec-

Reassesses Intelligence Reports

U.S. Ponders Mexican Oil Flow

By Richard Halloran

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (NYT) - U.S. intelligence may well have underestimated Mexican oil resources. Quietly, the flow has begun to figure prominently in the energy calculations of U.S. officials as they project the nation's future consumer, industrial and strategic needs.

Within the last two years, production in Mexico has doubled. Exports to the United States have nearly quadrupled. And estimates of Mexico's "possible" oil reserves have leapt enough to prompt speculation that Mexico may conceivably be the world's richest source of oil, surpassing even Saudi Arabia in its long-term potential. Saudi Arabia in its long-term potential.

According to U.S. estimates, Mexico has 50 billion barrels of "proven" reserves and 157 billion barrels of probable reserves, with the rest "possible." The latest intelligence estimate of Mexico's proven reserves — the most conservative yardstick, which includes only oil deposits of known quantity and known to be economically recoverable — is roughly three times the figure published earlier this year by the Oil and Gas Journal, an industry publi-

Mexican oil production is 1.5 million barrels a day now and is projected to rise to four to five million barrels a day within two to three years. Of current production, 320,000 barrels a day are imported into the United States to provide 5.3 percent of U.S. imported oil. Saudi Arabia provides 16.5 percent of the oil imported bere, and Nigeria

16.5 percent of the oil imported bere, and Nigeria 15.2 percent. Imports contribute about 40 percent of U.S. oil consumption.

[In London, U.S. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger warned yesterday that the "crunch point" in world oil supplies will be reached by the mid-1980s or by the early 1990s at the latest. He said political instability in Iran and other Middle Eastern countries could interrupt oil supplies even earlier. Officials here bave drafted proposals for a new policy toward Mexico and President Carter report edly will decide on the framework of that policy before he goes to Mexico City on a visit scheduled

In their latest assessment, U.S. officials said they thought the consequences of the Mexican oil development would include the following:

Mexican oil production will probably increase fast enough to ease the shortages of supply expected in the mid-1980's though not enough to eliminate these shortages.

nate those shortages.

• In the longer run, the prospects for Mexican oil have put off the projected "doomsday" of declining world oil supplies well into the 21st centu-

The increasing volume of Mexican oil in world markets will tend to restrain price increases. But no official here foresees a Mexican attempt in undercut prices set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, as that would not be in Mexico's interest. Mexico is not a member of OPEC and has given no sign of joining.

The income from Mexican oil will obviously contribute to economic development there and will contribute to economic development there and will ease the high rate of unemployment. That will less-

Strategically, Mexico gives the United States another source of supply that decreases U.S. dependence on Saudi Arabia, Iran and other Middle Eastern suppliers.

French Agreement

PARIS, Nov. 30 (AP-DJ) - Freneb Industry Minister Andre Girand is expected to conclude an agreement for oil imports during his visit to Mexico Dec. 6-12, sources said today.

Meanwhile, in a separate accord with Pemex, Cie. Francaise des Petroles has been testing a shipment of Mexican oil to assess its quality vis-a-vis French requirements.

Currency Market Rife With Suspicion

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 (AP-DJ) - Foreign-exchange market participants are beset by morning after misgivings, jealousies and suspi-cions following President Carter's $30-billion surprise package to de-fend the dollar announced Nov. 1.

There is widespread suspicion in the market that — despite huge losses by many traders that had heavily bought other currencies some traders did make money as a result of advance knowledge of what was going to happen: infor-mation obtained by fair means or closeness of government and business in Japan, some international sources say, if the authorities there bad, bowever subtly, tipped Tokyo commercial bankers to the imminent possibility of action. Why othcrwise, wonders a New York businessmen, would a Japanese client have wired earlier that week an urgent request for its total bill?

The most divisive suspicions among U.S. foreign-exchange members, though, are that some of their own number had pure "inside" information from friends in Washington. "A West Coast rumor, for instance, has it that some big New York banks received a furtive
"briefing" from the New York Fed-Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey, who attended the cabinet meeting, has already made clear that there were still large areas of disagreement to be resolved among the Common Market countries if Britain was to join the control of the Exchequer Despite Washington's satisfaction that the secret was totally preserved for maximum impact, the most bitter among the bankers grumble that someone must have solved among the Common Market countries if Britain was to join the the control of the Exchequer Despite Washington's satisfaction that the secret was totally preserved for maximum impact, the most bitter among the bankers grumble that someone must have solved among the Common Market countries if Britain was to join the the control of the Exchequer Denis Healey, who attended the cabinet meeting, has already made clear that there were still large grumble that someone must have solved among the Common Market countries if Britain was to join the the secret was totally preserved for maximum impact, the most bitter among the bankers grumble that someone must have solved among the Common Market countries if Britain was to join the the secret was totally preserved for maximum impact, the most bitter among the bankers grumble that someone must have solved among the Common Market countries if Britain was to join the the secret was totally preserved for maximum impact, the most bitter among the bankers grumble that someone must have sign currency dealings on the government's behalf. Insiders?

The legality of receiving and benefiting from any such information is not in question, and indeed, cynical bankers confide privately that they would not hesitate to do the same if they could. "I wish I could be part of these leaks," enviously frets a European trader here. According to those who feel like outsiders, the most likely to have 'inside" information are bankers who once worked in the federal agencies involved in such matters and who thus might have special access to their former colleagues. Although there is no doubt that big banks do bid eagerly to employ former Washington officials, those which have hired them counter that is not in hopes of anything so blatant, and easily discoverable, as favoritism. Rather, it is because they can read the tea leaves," one

New York executive argues. While the officials' statements in the run-up to Nov. I left most traders convinced the administration would let the dollar sink indefinitely, the better-connected bankers acknowledge benefiting from clues which relatively few are equipped to decipher — such as simple

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (NYT)

— The managers of the Carter administration's voluntary wageprice stabilization campaign say they are getting so many inquiries from businessmen about how to comply with the standard for prices that they cannot get on with writ-ing the final regulations.

The phone calls and meetings with executives of major manufac-turing corporations have caused them to believe that big companies intend to comply, if only for public relations reasons, with the price standard and that the troublesome area may be wages.

This perception is diametrically opposed to that of labor leaders, especially George Meany, who, as president of the AFL-CIO, is the senior spokesman for trade unions. senior spokesman for trade unions.

Mr. Meany has asserted repeatedly that the wage standard would be enforced by willing employers but that they would be free to exceed the price standard because the program is voluntary.

"It's very hectic right now — in fact, it's accelerating," commented John Layng, an assistant commissioner at the Bureau of Labor Statistics, who has been impressed into temporary duty at the council.

Mr. Layng is the government's foremost maker of price indexes. His presence at the council is evidence of the considerable technical difficulties the council and the business world are experiencing in trying to put into effect a price standard that is supposed to be simple and flexible.

Already, the rules about bow to apply the price slowdown are proliferating, as they did under the Nixon Administration's mandatory price controls in 1971-74. Mr. Laying noted that the basic rule was written with manufacturing in mind and that he and others are now working on ways to apply the rule to other sectors — notably retailing, financial services, bealth

And why we see these buys doubling from today's levels

If you buy stocks when everybody else wants them, you have to pay a high demand premium which can severely restrict profit possibilities.

However, if you buy when stocks are unpopular because of well-publicized economic or political problems, you can get in at hargain-basement levels, which often are exceeded by large percentages simply as conditions snap back to normal.

CAPITAL GAINS RESEARCH, an international concern with an aggressive money-management philosophy, has selected several specialized growth issues which it sees doubling out of today's phase of general stock-market confusion.

ESSAYS ON LITERATURE AND POLITICS 1932-1972

By Philip Rahy. Edited by Arabel J. Porter and Andrew J. Dvosin, With a Memoir by Mary McCarthy. Houghton Mifflin. 366 pp. S15.

Reviewed by John Leonard

PHILIP RAHV was quite right in leaving out most of his po-litical essays from his three collecuons of criticism. These essays weren't very good, and he probably knew it. They were, of course, "correct" as we have come on the whole to agree with the meaning of "correct" in the history of the American left-intelligentsia from Lenin to Nixon.

That is, they faithfully recorded his revulsion from Stalinism in the 1930s, his sense that pacifism was not a sane response to Hitler in the '40s, his uneasy accommodation with establishmentarian liberalism in the '50s, his opposition to the Vietnam War in the '60s, and his hopes for and dismay at the specta-cle of the New Left in the '70s. And it seems likely that Rahv, more perhaps as an editor than as a writer, was indispensable in defining the disputatious political style of such Partisan Review intellectuals as Dwight Macdonald, Mary McCarthy, Meyer Schapiro, Harold Rosenberg, the Trillings, Irving Howe and so on.

But it is primarily as a literary critic that he will be remembered and cherished — the European, as Mary McCarthy puts it in her marvelous memoir, who jumped into American literary waters and refused to swim with the tide; and the modernist, who brought us Kafka and Gogol and Dostoyevsky and who rejected the damp religios-ity of the Christ-pushing New Crit-ics on the banks of the Sewanee Review.

Dormant Radicalism

His radicalism was dormant for three decades. His Marxism, or, as he sometimes called it, his "democratic socialism," was never as mus-cular as, say, Irving Howe's in the '50s and the '60s, And, at the beginning and at the end, when he did speak of politics, his tone was bumptious and his ideas hand-me-

Thus, in 1932, he could tell us in the pages of New Masses that the Greek idea of "katharsis" as formulated by Aristotle was "merely a sort of transcendental mental laxative," "a static, passive concep-tion quite in line with the needs of a slave-owning class . . '. unwilling to permit the even tenor of its parasitic existence to be disturbed by gruesome realities," whereas a "proletarian katharsis" impels us "to a course of action, of militant struggle; it objectifies art to such a degree that it becomes instrumental in aiding to change the world.

And thus, in 1971, quoting Lenin against Tom Hayden in the pages of Modern Occasions, be could say that "one's disappointment with the experience of the New Left comes down precisely to this: that it has failed to crystallize from

Why, then, five years after his death, have the editors of this new collection exhumed this feeble stuff? It is nice to have new chapters from the book on Dostovevsky that he never finished. It is interesting, although not very, to read his book reviews of Alexander Solzhenitsyn's "August 1914" and Svetlana Stalin's autobiography. anc iii

Much Omitted

But it is a damned shame that, in order to make room for excerpts from "The Literary Class War" and "The Sense and Nonsense of Whittaker Chambers" and "What and Where Is the New Left?," so much splendid criticism has been omitred, including "The Myth and the Wir Powerhouse." "Freud and the Litreary Mind" and essays on Melville, Hemingway, Thomas Mann, found in Rahv's own collection,

The Essays' is in every other way inference of the Miss of the Sixth of t rior to "Literature and the Sixth) of Sense," It is shorter by 91 pages and more expensive by $5.

In leaving out Freud, it leaves out one of the two epic poems—the other was written by Marx—to which Rahv listened most appreciatively, We are advised that all three Raby's own collections are out print, and so "Essays" is ised. We are not advised as to why Houghton Mifflin allowed An "Literature and the Sixth Sense" to go out of print, making "Essays"

Still: some Rahy is better than none. He must have been lonely at the end, estranged as much from the conservatism of Commentary magazine as from the new "swing-ing" Partisan Review and disdainful of an age of what be called "that orgastic self-glorification that you may find in our hipster writers who make do with the self (the: ravenous, raging self of erotic fan-tasy and adolescent daydreams of power) when talent and moral intelligence failed them."

I once received a note from him to had rewe were strangers, but I had reviewed "Literature and the Sixth 14. 101. Sense" - suggesting that since we were summer neighbors in southern New Hampshire, I might visit, I considered what I knew, and what I knew. I had mostly cribbed from him, and I thought if I went I would be found out, and so I didn't go. That was cowardly. It can't hurt that much to be found out.

On any given deal, it is quite likely that somebody will break even or even gain after making a bad bid, a bad play or a bad defense.

South made a terrible bid on the diagramed deal, reached a terrible contract and survived with some help from his opponents. The opening of one diamond, the response of one heart and the overall of one spade were all quite nor-mal, but South then went berserk. He had sat through a long evening without picking up anything close to an opening bid, so 16 high-card points and good distribution seemed, relatively speaking, like the

Since a one-level response shows very little, a direct jump to Black-wood by the opener is almost nonexistent. It might happen with a 6-5-1-1 distribution when partner has bid the five-card suit, or with a break, such as 10-1-1-1.

Three diamonds and two clubs were the obvious choices for South, and an optimist might think about three clubs or a cue-bid of two spades. The actual four no-trump bid wrongly suggested that the combined hands held the values for a slam, that aces were the crucial factor, and that South knew the

When North denied an Boe.
South settled in five diamonds without much of an idea about whether this was the right contract. He won the opening spade lead, cursed himself for overbidding and led his singleton heart. West now came to South's rescue by putting up the heart king, "Second-hand low" was the appropriate guideline, and specifically he should have judged that South would not underlead the ace in such a position.

The defense continued spades, and South ruffed. He could see a faint bope if he could reach the dummy twice, so he decided to play West for the diamond jack. He cleared the first hurdle by leading a trump to the nine, and then played the beart geen, ruffing East's ace.

Dummy was entered with anoth-er trump lead, and the heart jack and nine furnished two club discards, since the ten fell obligingly from East. It was then rounne to finesse in clubs and draw trumps for I l tricks.

Was justice done? In the play perhaps, for South played well and West defended badly. But South's bidding was unpunished, and he was left unrepentant.

Renault Names Drivers

LA CASTELLET, France, Nov. 30 (AP) — Renault has announced that it will run a two-car team for the 1979 Formula One season, with tria, on Dec. 9, followed by a Jean-Pierre Jabouille and Rene Ar- downhill at the same site 24 hours noux as the drivers.

hockey arena, saying the price was $100,000 over the assessed value. It has refused to pay $400,000 in year executive director in early October. He is Peter Spurney, a 44year-old management expert credited with having saved the Bicentennial Freedom Train and the Spo-kane Expo '74 from bankruptcy.

surance package were relatives and employees of an Olympic Commit-tee member, and because the con-"I'm optimistie," he said. "This is the first time I've had so much tract had not been put up for bids.

It held up $376,000 in payments to the Gilbane Co. to force it to time to work, and we'll have a trial run — the World Alpine Cham-pionships — in 1979."

The size of the Town of Lake

Placid works for and against the committee in press reports and Congressional scrutiny. On the oce hand, the people are the Little Cuys That Could, the village of 2,800 that mustered enough voter goodwill and business savvy to beat Denver for the games. On the other hand, they are called small town Babbitts, constantly running afnul of federal conflict-of-interest laws, and unprepared in meet the legal guns of Cora-Cola, Adidas, K-2 Skis and other sponsors.

Caught in Middle

An example of one caught in the middle is John Wilkins, a successful local realtor who hammered out $20 million in contracts with ABC. European and Japanese television that will pay almost a quarter of the committee's administrative budget, but whn was loudly criti-cized when the Economic Develop-ment Administration balked at paying the premiums on a contrac-tor's insurance policy on which he had acted as agent, and balked again when his nepbews and employees, Edward and Robert Damp, offered to be the agents.

"What's wrnng with that?" Wilkins said later. "They're independent brokers — and they're among the few in the North Country who can write a wrapup insurance package of that size.

"I'm nnt their only uncle. They're related to five people on the committee. So's the girl who runs the stationery store where we buy our notepads. Most of the hotel owners are on the committee, and they bouse visiting dignitaries. We deposit millinns in the Bank of Lake Placid Some of its directors are on the committee too."

Townspeople agree that some nepotism is unavoidable. Juhn Jenkins, owner of Captain Billy's Whizz-Rang, a sandwich shop across the street from the speed-skating rink, said: "When there are only 2,800 people in town, you have to deal with the intelligent ones — even if they're your brother-in-law."

Capitals' Coach Gives Up His Scorecard

LANDOVER, Md., Nov. 30 (UPI) — As a bockey player, Danny Belisle never gave much thought to being a coach in the NHL Now that he is the coach of the Washington Capitals, be understands why.

"Players never really understand what goes into coaching," said Belisle, who was named as coach just two days before the season opened. You go like crazy playing your position and you understand what your teammates have to do while you're on the ice. But you don't worry about all the other things that have to take place.

Coaching is a lonely job. A lot of teams are going for assistant coaches, more to keep the head man company than anything else. in my case [no assistant] I talk to Max McNab [the general manager] and we trade viewpoints on games and players." Belisle said that he needed the first month of the season to learn the Capitals' players. With only one practice prior to the season-opener, he had to keep a scorecard to identify the players. "I think I know the guys now,"

Some New Wrinkles

By Russell Baker

TEW YORK - The man and woman behind us at the theiter were talking about a friend tho was reluctant to have her face ifted. "She'd made all the arrangenents and then canceled at the last ninute," said the woman.

"She's already starting to wrinkle ad," said the man. His voice caried authority. He 🛚 nust have been a professional, a nan who understood wrinkling ind knew what it could do to a ace. He sounded worried. "She says she'll get it done next ear." the woman said. The man ob-riously didn't believe it. There was resignation to his voice. "She'll never get it done," he said. "She's just going to go ahead and wrinkle. Let's watch the show."

He had washed his hands of this foolish woman who voluntarily doomed herself to wrinkling. She deserved nothing but contempt. I sat staring at the frail fiction on the stage, but my mind filled with pictures of a woman sitting alone at a phone that never rang because she refused to submit her face to the scalpel.

A swirl of taut-skinned beautiful people of indeterminate age was off on the town in a bustle of furs and exposed chest hair and one of them asked, "Whatever became of old Nellie?" And someone replied, Would you believe it - she chose to become a wrinkler."

My sensitivity to this case arises from recent exposure to people from Southern California, much of whose conversation deals with who has just had what done to his or ber face by whom. The first thing people do on arriving out there is to buy a Mercedes-Benz and the secand is to get a face-lift.

A New York womao tells of meeting a California man at a party, having a long discussion, then asking another woman for his name. It turned out to be a man she had known for years — let's say his name was Bill. "That's not Bill." the protested. "I've known Bill since Hector was a pup.

"Sure," said the other woman, "but the Bill you knew is all up there on the back of his skull now." California, as we know, is the wave of the future. Having the eyes "done," tucking the chin and taking a mortgage to buy a Mercedes have already been taken up in New York. Just the other day I saw my first stretched Mercedes parked on East 58th Street. Between front and rear seat, space had been added for two baths and a dining room. How much longer can a man go on the streets wrinkled without becoming

I had been worrying this quesuoo before overhearing that conversation at the theater. Nobody had actually come right out and said, "You're wrinkliog," but I had become sensitive to a certain coolness lately among the kind of women who pass inspection at Studio 54 and men who wear invaliers instead

Have they been waiting for me to leave so they can have a good time?
If so, why? They remember the same things I do — Melvin Purvis getting Dillioger, Franklin Roosevelt swamping Alf Landon, nickel

I bave considered facial improvements, but am not certain wrinkle removal qualifies as such. For a long time, I was smooth of face and thoroughly unhappy about it. Uoul I was 30 years old, bartenders de-manded documentary evidence that I was of legal drinking age and bus drivers still called me "Sonny." At that time I wanted to wrinkle, and fast, and I wanted it with the same passion with which people oowadays want to unwrinkle overnight.

This is not wby I remain reluctant to surrender my hard-earned seams to a plastic surgeon. The central question is whether the smooth mug is here to stay or just another fashion flash in the reorganized pan. My history of not catching up with new trends until they are outof-date began with saving for an Orphan Annie mug when every-body else had moved on to Dick Tracy decoders and coolloued just recently with buying a suit with flared cuffs and tight legs when everybody else has moved on to tight cuffs and flared legs.

If I get an expensive oew tight face it's a sure bet that the following week Jerry Brown will turn up in Malibu wearing the brand-new Miz Lillian wrinkles and trying to pretend be knows John Dillinger from Henry Kissinger. This is the same reason I haven't bought pink eyegiasses.

Gnomania

There's No Biz Like Gnome Biz

By Jules B. Farber

A MSTERDAM, Nov. 30 (IHT) — The United States is in the grip of a gnomania. The gnome hysteria also has swept into Europe and Australia. Next year. France, Japan and Chioa will have their share of gnomaniacs. Rising in epi-demic proportions, there now seems to be no business like gnome busi-ness. This week marked the first birthday celebrations of a book called "Gnomes" — oo the U.S. best-seller list

Poortvliet for a full year. It all started with a Dutch book, "Leven en Werken van de Kabouter" (The Life and Work of the Gnome). written by Dutch physician Wil Huygen. with drawings by Rien Poortvliet. When Unieboek is-sued this tongue-io-cheek sociological study — it reads like Margaret Mead edited by Woody Allen — the Dutch publishers never dreamed their suburban Baarn offices would become world gnome headquarters. Or "Gnomes" would become the first Dutch book ever to achieve a prestigious 12-mooth ranking on the U.S. best-seller

In the small bome market, more than 276,000 copies bave gone over Dutch counters at 49.50 guilders (around $25) each. Harry N. Abrams, Inc., the New York art-book publishers, bought the American rights and sold more than 600,000 copies at

The 212-page, full-color vol-ume — with hundreds of Poortvliet's drawings — resulted from more than 20 years of gnome-watching, always done at night since these little people (6 inches high when fully grown) only come out after twilight. The nature-loving illustrator recalls: We dug holes leading to their underground habitats, covered ourselves in camouflage oetting and waited for them to surface. But those little guys had been watching us right from the outset and were playing games with us. It was only after we had made a serious impression on the Gnome Council that we were given full cooperation and the right to produce a definitive

All Kinds

Poortvliet remembers, "Slowly we came into contact with all kinds of gnomes and they told us everything about themselves. Well, nearly everything."

Among the little-gnome facts uncovered by Poortviet and Huygen: The male gnome weighs 300 grams, the female anywhere from 250 to 275 grams. Gnomes are a phenomegrams. Gnomes are a pheoomenoo of the northern bemisphere, preferring an environment where the winter days are short. The darker and more mysterious the surroundings, the more the little folk like it. Sightings are never made in bright, sunny countries like Spain and Italy.

This gnome-tome examines the six common races of gnomes - forest, garden, bouse, dune, farm and Siberian - and reveals day-to-day life, courtship, marriage, boocymooos and even sex. habits. Some of the major findings: The average gnome has a lifespan of 400 years, can run faster than a hare, is seven times stronger than man and bas sense of smell 19 times more accurate.

Males wear pointed hats, which are never removed except when they go to bed, or perbaps take a bath. Males are sexually potent until the age of 350. The female can only conceive once, has a 12-month pregnancy and always has twins. Gnome children wear diapers until age 12. They live with their parents until they are 100 years old.

The publisher's pundits had a field day in gnomenclature, promoting every conceivable kind of merchandise. It ranges from statiooery, wrapping paper, jig-saw puzzles, calendars, posters, prints, gnome bomes, soft sculp-ture, pillows, bean bags, needlepoint kits, timepieces, laundry bags and oversized ballpoint pens to bumper stickers ("Caution! I Brake for Gnomes"), silver-plated Christmas tree ornaments, porcelsin, jewelry, diamond-eyed gnome pins, life-size gnome soap and badges. Badge-wearers sport slogans like: "To Gnome Is To Love Me," "All Roads Lead to Goome," "You're Gnomebody Til Somebody Loves You,"

"Gnoman Is An Island," and "There's No Place Like

Gnome."

Americans are organizing gnome parties with instructions for making the sine qua gnome (the required gnome cap) and a meno gastrongnomique. It consists of clams casignome, potage a l'ognome, gnomelets assortis, carre de l'agnome roti, gnomes de terre frites, salade du cham-pignomes, baked gnome Alaska and cafe cappucignome.

All this is accompanied by a Cabernet Sauvignome 1976 and a Chateaugnome du Pape 1946. A recipe for gnome spice cake is given along with the social note that gnomes always greet one another by rubbing noses. Sug-gested music is "Gnome, Gnome on the Range" or "Gnomin' in the Glosmin." Those who aren't party-prone are advised to "gnosh with a gnome." The party package creator used a gnome de plume.

The puns persist in the publisher's promotional material. One learns that jolly lat gnomes who love to eat are gastrognomes; a gnome house is a gnomocile; a female gnome is addressed as gnoma'am. The volume has been gnominated as the best book of the year and 1978 designated as the year of "Gnome news is good news" continues in the marketplace. Rizzoli's Italian edition sold out in a month and is being reprinted. Germany is in a third print-ing. In Finland, sales are pop-ping. "Gnomes" has captured the No. 1 spot on the Australian best seller list. And 1979 promises even more. Sweden and Norway are now translating local editions. Paris publisher Albin Michel is convinced that the French are ready to recognize these little people. Abrams is producing a Japanese edition and a U.S. paperback edition with Bantam Books. In Britain, the New English Library will have a paper-back edition with Pan Books. And a "legal" Chinese edition will be published by Formosan Magazine Press Ltd. in Taiwan, Conclusion: Gnomatter what
